Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: the applicant's claim states "the communication being originated in either the mobile telephone (7) or the remote server (1) in an independent way". The examiner has presented Smith that teaches a mobile phone (Fig. 1 [120]) that originates a communication (Fig. 4) in an independent way. The applicant's claim does not require a communication to originate in the remote server as the applicant has argued.

In response the applicant's argument regarding Smith that "the Smith patent does not contemplate the possibility of sending information to a mobile phone, only confirmation of the results", the examiner disagrees.

Smith teaches the "mobile device 120 sends a short message to a pre-defined address" with the "body of the short message is empty, or if the body contains a special string such as 'menu', then ultimately a menu would be sent by the HTTP Application on the relevant web IP server 152-156 to the mobile device 120" (Col. 7 lines 62-67), which is then translated back to an SMS for deliver to the mobile device. (Col. 9 lines 50-55) Therefore, the Smith patent does contemplate the possibility of sending information to a mobile phone.
